« I was like, I'm not going to take the small one (trophies), I'm taking the big one. I have been so close. This will probably be the heartbreak of my life. — Linda Noskova about her mindset before the start of the deciding set against Karolina Muchova in the Wimbledon final »

« For 99 per cent of the players, that would be very good; for me, it's good but not good enough. Because I'm blessed and cursed to be used to the highest degree in terms of results and achievements. — Novak Djokovic, following his Wimbledon exit »

Sarvesh Kushare finishes third on Diamond League debut in Monaco, beating some big stars, including three-time world champion and Tokyo Olympics gold winner Mutaz Essa Barshim of Qatar, Gianmarco

Tamberi of Italy and JuVaughn Harrison of the USA.

He sailed over 2.26m to take the third spot and grabbed a remarkable personal milestone. With this victory, he became the first Indian high jumper to finish on the podium at a Diamond League meet.

The International Olympic Committee (IOC) lifted the restrictions on Russian athletes, allowing them to compete in team events and in qualifying competitions for the 2028 Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

However, they kept in place the ban on the Russian national anthem being played and the national flag being displayed. They also stated that the returning Russian athletes would have to pass "multiple" doping tests before being allowed to participate.

WORLD RECORD

Summer McIntosh broke the longest-standing individual women's swimming world record, finishing the 200-metre butterfly in 2:01.65s at the Canadian trials. The 19-year-old eclipsed the 2:01.81 mark set by China's Liu Zige in 2009 during the sport's so-called super-suit era. A three-time champion at the Paris 2024 Games, McIntosh had long targeted the record, having come within 0.18 seconds of it with a time of 2:01.99 at last year's World Championships. ^{AP}
