All-time top-scorer

Miroslav Klose's record of 16 World Cup goals was outdone with ease amid the intense battle for the Golden Boot between Kylian Mbappe and Lionel Messi. Mbappe, the France captain, finished with 10 goals this edition to take the overall World Cup record to 22, one more than Messi.

Goals in most editions - Cristiano Ronaldo (6)

Portugal had to endure a Round-of-16 elimination at the hands of eventual champion Spain, but skipper Cristiano Ronaldo did find the back of the net thrice to become the first man to score at six editions. The 41-year-old also became the second-oldest player to score behind Cameroon's Roger Milla.

Most saves in a match - Eloy Room (16)

Curacao might have started the World Cup with a 1-7 demolition at the hands of Germany, but the smallest nation by population did show its mettle in a 0-0 draw with Ecuador. Custodian Eloy Room tallied 16 saves in that game to level Tim Howard's single-match record for the USA in 2014.

Most wins as head coach - Didier Deschamps (20)

Didier Deschamps' long reign as France head coach might have ended on a bitter note following a 4-6 loss to England in the third-place playoff. But it was not before the 2018 World Cup winner tallied the most wins as coach in the competition, going ahead of German Helmut Schon.

Most clean sheets in an edition

Spain goalkeeper Unai Simon conceded just a solitary goal throughout the entire tournament, en route to keeping seven clean sheets. Simon broke Walter Zenga's long-standing record for most minutes without conceding a goal (517), extending it to 649 minutes before conceding against Belgium in the quarterfinal.
