RECURVE MEN'S INDIVIDUAL

DHIRAJ BOMMADEVARA

Dhiraj enters this edition of the Asian Games as the highest-ranked Asian recurve archer in the world, sitting No. 10 globally and No. 1 in Asia.

That ranking has been built on a string of performances stretching back to the Asian Championships in late 2025, where he beat compatriot Rahul in the final to clinch his maiden Asian gold.

The result came with an asterisk, though, as the field was missing some of the usual heavyweight names.

There was no such caveat at World Cup Stage 3 in Antalya, where Dhiraj impressed en route to individual gold.

In the final, Dhiraj beat South Korea's Lee Woo Seok 7-3. Lee, ranked No. 4 in Asia, is part of the Korean trio set to compete at the Asiad, alongside Kim Je Deok and Kim Woojin, the triple gold medallist at the Paris Olympics.

Both Kim and Dhiraj went toe-to-toe in the qualification round at World Cup Stage 4 in Madrid, with the Korean taking top spot with 695, just four points ahead of Dhiraj. Neither, however, went on to medal. Kim crashed out in the third round, while Dhiraj bowed out in the quarterfinals.

Kim is likely to be the biggest obstacle in Dhiraj's quest for a maiden Asian Games gold. The South Korean holds the clear advantage in experience and reputation, but Dhiraj can draw confidence from their previous meetings, not least his 6-2 win over Kim at the World Cup Final in 2023.
