

SQUASH

ANAHAT SINGH

In 2023, when Anahat Singh went to Hangzhou for her Asian Games debut, she wasn't picked for the singles event. Three years later, she is India's top-ranked player and one of the favourites for the gold medal in the women's competition. The 18-year-old, who hails from Delhi, has enjoyed remarkable growth in a very short span. She dominated the junior circuit and recently made history by becoming India's first-ever Junior World Champion. At the same time, she has successfully made the transition to the senior level and shown that she belongs there.

With squash set to make its Olympic debut in Los Angeles in 2028, the stakes have never been higher at the Asian Games. World No. 20 Anahat is Asia's third-best player at the moment, behind Malaysia's Sivasangari Subramaniam (World No. 5) and Japan's Satomi Watanabe (World No. 6). Anahat has not beaten either of the two players so far, but with a ticket to LA on the cards, an upset cannot be ruled out.
