RUPA BAYOR

In Rupa Bayor, India has a strong gold medal favourite in women's individual poomsae, a non-combative discipline in taekwondo at the upcoming Asian Games in Aichi-Nagoya.

Rupa, who hails from Arunachal Pradesh, is currently ranked seventh in the world and is the Asian No. 1. In fact, she is the first Indian to break into the world's top 10. She has won two bronze medals at the Asian Taekwondo Poomsae Championships and has also clinched multiple medals at other international events.

Raised by a single mother, Rupa was introduced to karate as a child by her uncle before being encouraged to switch to taekwondo.

Rupa can end India's 24-year wait for a medal in taekwondo. Surendra Bhandari's bronze from the 2002 edition in Busan remains the only podium finish by an Indian in the sport.
