

SAILING

MEN'S ILCA 7

REUTERS

Indian contingent

Katya Ida Coelho (Women's Windsurfing), Nethra Kumanan (Women's Dinghy), Harshita Tomar and Shital Verma (Women's Skiff), Mahi Verma (Girls' Dinghy), Shraddha Verma and Ravindra Kumar Sharma (Mixed Dinghy), Manu Francis and Prince Kurisinkal Noble (Men's Skiff), Vishnu Saravanan (Men's Dinghy)

TOTAL MEDALS AT STAKE

42

SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT

WOMEN'S
ILCA 6

VISHNU SARAVANAN

Vishnu Saravanan remains India's strongest sailing gold prospect, with defending champion Ryan Lo starting as the favourite. The two-time Olympian won the 2022 Asian title and took bronze at Hangzhou, finishing just one net point behind South Korea's Ha Jeemin. His sixth place at Kiel Week this year was the first top-10 finish by an Indian in an ILCA 7 Sailing Grand Slam event. At the World Championship in August, Lo finished seventh, Ha 32nd and Saravanan 37th, highlighting the gap to the defending champion. Saravanan, however, has shown he can stay in medal contention across an Asian fleet series. Consistency will be key at Kaiyoh Yacht Harbor, particularly in avoiding the costly scores that hurt him at the Worlds.

NETHRA KUMANAN

Nethra Kumanan enters as an outside gold prospect rather than a favourite. She finished fourth at Hangzhou with 41 net points, three behind bronze medallist Victoria Chan but 16 behind Malaysian champion Nur Shazrin Mohamad Latif. Her recent results are more encouraging. Kumanan placed 40th at the 2025 World Championship, ahead of Hangzhou silver medallist Stephanie Norton in 46th and Nur Shazrin in 48th. At Kiel Week this June, she recovered from an opening disqualification to finish 15th on 117 points, one behind Norton. The two-time Olympian must turn occasional low scores into a consistent series and avoid losing ground at the starts.