

JUDO

Indian contingent

Asmita Dey (Women's 48kg), Yamini Mourya (Women's 57kg), Inunganbi Takhellambam (Women's 70kg)

TOTAL MEDALS AT STAKE

60

India is sending a squad of just three judokas to the upcoming Asian Games, but all three have produced big results this year. Inunganbi Takhellambam ended a 13-year wait for an Indian podium finish at the Asian Championships with a bronze, while Asmita (in pic, white) created history at the Commonwealth Games in Glasgow by winning the country's first-ever gold medal in the sport at the event. Yamini Mourya also impressed with a silver in Glasgow.

The Asian Games, however, will present a much tougher challenge. The categories in which Yamini and Inunganbi compete will both feature the reigning Asian Championships gold medallists. Asmita's category, meanwhile, includes judokas with Olympic experience.

No Indian woman other than Poonam Chopra, the bronze medallist at Hiroshima in 1994, has finished on the Asian Games podium. This trio has the potential to end that 32-year wait.

Indian contingent

Aryan (Men's 56kg), Vikrant Baliyan (Men's 75kg), Suraj Singh Mayanglambam (Men's Changquan), Nyeman Wangsu (Women's Changquan), Aparna (Women's 52kg), Divyanshi (Women's 60kg), Langlontombi Devi Hanjabam (Women's Nanquan & Nandao)

TOTAL MEDALS AT STAKE

52

WUSHU

Like rowing, wushu has been a reliable source of medals for India, with the country never finishing an Asian Games campaign without a medal in the sport since it made its debut in Doha in 2006.

Wangkhem Sandhyarani Devi in 2010 and Naorem Roshibina Devi in 2023 have achieved India's best results so far, both winning silver medals.

For the upcoming edition in Aichi-Nagoya, India is sending a seven-member squad and will hope to extend its streak of podium finishes.