In the last two editions of the Asian Games, India has won a dressage team gold, an individual dressage bronze, and silver medals in both the individual and team eventing competitions.

Only Hriday Chheda, part of the champion Indian dressage team in Hangzhou, and Fouaad Mirza (in pic), who won both eventing silvers in 2018, will feature in Aichi-Nagoya as part of the main lineup.

India has opted for a relatively inexperienced squad after a build-up riddled with selection disputes and administrative hiccups, while one rider lost his berth after his horse tested positive for a parasitic infection.

Among the contingent, Mirza's experience and proven record in eventing make him one of India's strongest medal prospects.

However, there will be no Indian representation in show jumping after the Sports Ministry decided against fielding a squad due to failure to clear its eligibility criteria. A desperate legal appeal by riders in the fray eventually went in vain.
