

Dinusha in elite list

606 } The number of runs aggregated by Sri Lankan Sonal

Dinusha after five matches in his Test career. This is now the eighth-highest run-aggregate by any batter in Test history after the first five Test matches, in a list topped by India's Sunil Gavaskar with 831 runs. Interestingly, at this juncture in his career, Don Bradman had scored just one run more than Dinusha despite playing an extra innings, which means the Sri Lankan is in good company, as shown in the first table. A similar table of Asian batters is also listed.

Note: Mendis and Dinusha have only appeared in batting positions from six or lower in their first five Test matches; + left-handed batters

115 } Dhruv Jurel's unbeaten knock at the

SSC in Colombo is the highest score by a visiting Indian batter at No. 7 or lower in the sub-continent. He now joins Hardik Pandya to become the second visiting Indian No. 7 or lower batter to register a three-figure Test score in the sub-continent. Jurel, meanwhile, also recorded the fourth-highest score by a visiting batter at No. 7 or lower on Sri Lankan soil. The two tables have the details.

26 } Shubman Gill's age when he became the 28th Indian batter to aggregate over 3000 runs in a Test career, thus becoming the fourth youngest from India to achieve this milestone. Five Indians, led by Sachin Tendulkar, have reached this milestone before the age of 27. The table below has the details.
