

» FROM THE
WORLD OF FOOTBALL

FOR MORE STORIES

FROM DEAD BALLS TO LIVE WIRES

After last season's set-piece criticism, Arsenal has offered the perfect response with a flurry of open-play goals to start the new campaign.

Joan Mathew Jacob

joan.mathew@thehindu.co.in

Last season, Arsenal caught flak for being excessively reliant on set pieces as they ended a two-decade-long wait to lift the English crown. This time around, however, the Gunners seem determined to give rival fans no chance to undermine their success, finding the back of the net six times in three games, all from open play.

Bukayo Saka was the saviour as Arsenal edged Aston Villa, but the club truly showed its mettle in the following high-profile clash against Chelsea. Morgan Rogers got the Blues off the mark just 77 seconds after kick-off, but Mikel Arteta's side reacted like a defending champion, with Kai Havertz beating Emiliano Martinez at the near post from the edge of the box before Christos Tzolis set up captain Martin Odegaard for the winner.

Manchester City is the only other team to win its first three games of the season, with Erling Haaland and Rayan Cherki grabbing a brace each to sweep aside Crystal Palace, before Haaland's 300th career club goal helped Enzo Maresca's side nervously scrape past Coventry City.

The game also allowed City fans to lay eyes on all three of its pricey midfielders,

