

Thrilling finish: Lovepreet Singh (extreme left, facing page) came agonisingly close to a sensational gold in the men's 110kg+ weightlifting, only to be pipped by a single kilogram at the finish. It was silver, but one that felt every bit as memorable. Headline act: Competing in the women's 48kg, Mirabai Chanu (above) broke the Games records in the snatch, clean and jerk and total. PICS: GETTY IMAGES

K. Keerthivasan

keerthivasan.k@thehindu.co.in

From the moment Jhandu Kumar opened India's medal account with a bronze in the men's para powerlifting event, India remained in contention for podium finishes almost every day of the Glasgow Commonwealth Games in one sport or another.

That run lasted until the closing stages of the competition, ending only when Ishroop Narang narrowly missed out on a medal after losing the bronze-medal playoff in the women's 78kg judo event.

India finished fourth in the medal standings with 39 medals (13 gold, 17 silver and nine bronze), one of its best-ever finishes at the Games.

Apart from boxing and athletics, weightlifting has attracted the most attention because India has historically excelled in the sport, consistently contributing heavily to the country's medal tally at the CWG.

For all its eight medals, weightlifting fell slightly short of expectations. The sport returned with one gold, six silver and one bronze, down from the 10 medals India won at the 2022 Birmingham Games, suggesting a slight dip rather than a significant decline.