

Premier League games since the turn of the decade, it was Rayan Cherki who landed the opening blow in the first half with a silky, spectacular dribble, before Kai Havertz quickly restored parity thanks to Gianluigi Donnarumma's horrendous blunder inside his box.

With City in greater need of a win, Erling Haaland (above, extreme right) answered the call and bagged the winner 20 minutes into the second half after momentarily getting away from Gabriel Magalhaes inside the box to bury a pass squared by Nico O'Reilly.

Despite the victory, the gap is still three points, but City's game in hand means the steering wheel now rests in the hands of Guardiola and his men.

Meanwhile, the fight for the European spots also produced a significant result, with Manchester United edging out Chelsea 1-0. Matheus Cunha's late first-half strike not only strengthened United's Champions League hopes but also helped Bruno Fernandes record his 18th assist of the season, two short of the league record held by Thierry Henry and Kevin De Bruyne.

United sits third on 58 points (nine behind Man City), tied with Aston Villa in fourth. Reigning champion Liverpool occupies the final Champions League spot after winning 2-1 against Everton in the first Merseyside derby at the Hill Dickinson Stadium. The Reds needed a 100th-minute winner from Virgil van Dijk to reach 55 points, seven ahead of Chelsea in sixth.

While the top half of the table took shape, at the other end, the prospects of Tottenham Hotspur dropping down seem more and more likely. New manager Roberto De Zerbi has had a horror start to his rescue mission after a loss and a draw against Sunderland and Brighton & Hove Albion, respectively, leaving the side 18th with 31 points, one behind West Ham United.

Serie A

Inter Milan moved to within touching distance of winning a 21st Scudetto, as holder Napoli's slim hopes of defending the title vanished after a home loss to Lazio.

The Nerazzurri, on the other hand, eased past Cagliari thanks to goals from Marcus Thuram, Nicolo Barella and Piotr Zielinski to extend their tally to 78 points with five matches to play.

Its city rival, AC Milan, and Napoli sit second and third respectively, trailing by 12 points, while Juventus is fourth with 63 points.

Meanwhile, Cesc Fabregas-led Como's push to play in the Champions League next season faltered as it suffered back-to-back defeats against Inter Milan and Sassuolo, leaving it just outside the spots, five points behind Juve.

Ligue 1

Paris Saint-Germain is making a meal of its Ligue 1 title defence, falling to a 1-2 loss against Olympique Lyonnais. Brazilian wonderkid Endrick (below), on loan from Real Madrid, grabbed his fourth goal of the league campaign, and Afonso Moreira doubled the lead, while Khvicha Kvaratskhelia fired in a consolation goal in added time. The result worked in favour of RC Lens, which remains in contention to lift the trophy after bouncing back from two goals down to beat Toulouse 3-2.

It is still PSG's league to lose, as it holds on to top spot by a solitary point, while also having a game in hand over Lens.
