

It's Norway all the way

For a record-extending 11th time, Norway topped the medal table at the 2026 Winter Olympics, collecting 41 medals (18 gold, 12 silver, 11 bronze).

The charge was led by cross-country skier Johannes Høsflot Klæbo (pic, above), who completed a historic clean sweep of all six men's events to set a new record for most gold medals by an athlete at a single Winter Games, surpassing Eric Heiden's five from Lake Placid 1980.

The United States finished second with 33 medals (12 gold, 12 silver, 9 bronze), highlighted by a men's ice hockey gold after a 46-year wait, while the Netherlands placed third with 20 medals (10 gold, 7 silver, 3 bronze). Brazil's Lucas Pinheiro Braathen claimed giant slalom gold to secure South America's first Winter Olympics medal.
