Kane Williamson calls it a day

1 His final match ended in a 115-run defeat as England took a 1-0 lead in the three-Test series.

New Zealand great Kane Williamson (above, left) has retired from international cricket with immediate effect after the first Test against England at Lord's. The 35-year-old bows out as New Zealand's leading run-scorer across formats, with 19,346 runs, 48 centuries and six double hundreds in 378 internationals between 2010 and 2026. His final match ended in a 115-run defeat as England took a

1-0 lead in the three-Test series. Chasing 254, New Zealand was dismissed for 138 after resuming on 55-5, with Gus Atkinson (above, right) claiming 5-30 on a challenging Lord's surface.
