Aaron Rai becomes first Englishman to win PGA Championship since Jim Barnes

Aaron Rai holed a succession of clutch long-range putts to etch his name into golf history, clinching his maiden major title at the PGA Championship at Aronimink Golf Club.

Rai capped an erratic front nine with a stunning 40-foot eagle putt at the par-5 ninth before taking control of the tournament on the back nine with four birdies. The 31-year-old then removed any lingering doubt with a remarkable 68½-foot birdie putt at the par-3 17th.

With the victory, Rai became the first Englishman since Jim Barnes in 1919 to win the PGA Championship. The title had been won by Americans in each of the previous 10 editions.
