

Cup conquered: Pep Guardiola's Manchester City won the FA Cup title in its fourth consecutive final appearance. AFP

during United's 3-2 win over Nottingham Forest, which also secured the Red Devils third place this season.

"Obviously I'm very proud. We're speaking about Thierry and Kevin, two of the main names of the Premier League, and for me I'm very grateful and very happy to do it. It's a very proud moment," Bruno said.

He now has a chance to break the record on the final matchday against Brighton on May 24.

Meanwhile, Aston Villa booked its place in next season's Champions League after a Morgan Rogers brace condemned Liverpool to a 4-2 defeat. The Reds sit precariously in fifth place with 59 points and will now battle Bournemouth (55 points with a game in hand) for the final direct qualification berth.

City breaks Wembley curse

Pep Guardiola and Manchester City finally put their Wembley curse behind them by beating Chelsea 1-0 in the FA Cup final. City had lost the previous two Cup finals it contested, against Manchester United and Crystal Palace.

Antoine Semenyo's 71st-minute backheel flick was enough to hand the Cityzens their eighth title. With this triumph, a domestic treble is still on the cards for Guardiola's side, which continues to trail Arsenal in the league standings.

The Spaniard revealed that he had reserved celebrations for May 25, when the club is set to hold an open-top bus parade celebrating the achievements of both its men's and women's teams. City Women clinched the Women's Super League title in dominant fashion this season.

Kings over rivals

What could be better than succeeding in front of your arch-rival and rubbing it in its face? Barcelona did just that, beating Real Madrid 2-0 to clinch El Clasico bragging rights and lift its 29th La Liga title (below). Marcus Rashford and Ferran Torres were on target to secure the Catalans' second consecutive crown. It was also the first time since 2019 that Barcelona successfully defended the league title.

It is another trophyless season for Los Blancos, following a recent training-ground bust-up between Aurélien Tchouaméni and Federico Valverde. The latter was left nursing a head injury that ruled him out for a couple of weeks. The incident has put the spotlight on the team's environment and reports now suggest a possible return for Jose Mourinho.

Current coach Álvaro Arbeloa also backed Mourinho to replace him next season. "For me, as a former (Madrid) player and as a Madridista, Jose Mourinho is number one. He's one of ours," Arbeloa said. "If he comes back next year, I'll be very happy to see him back home."

Mourinho, now coach of Benfica — which failed to win Liga Portugal despite going unbeaten — coached Madrid between 2010 and 2013, leading it to the 2011-12 league title.

Business as usual for PSG, but signs of worry

PSG won its fifth consecutive Ligue 1 title — a record-extending 14th crown — after seeing off closest challenger Lens 2-0. A draw would have been enough, but Kvaratskhelia and Ibrahim Mbaye found the net for Luis Enrique's side.

However, the Spanish coach might be slightly concerned ahead of the Champions League final after PSG fell to a 2-1 defeat against neighbour Paris FC on the final matchday. Bradley Barcola had given his side the lead in the 49th minute, but Alimami Gory struck twice to help Paris notch its 11th win of the season.

Safe to say Enrique was unimpressed.

"Nothing positive to say about this match," he said. "When you play football without ambition or intensity, this is the sort of thing you'd expect to see."

"I knew before the match how difficult it would be to play this sort of game with no objective, but I'm a bit disappointed."
