

Shamrock prevails: Orla Prendergast's sublime half-century helped Ireland claim its first-ever win at the ICC Women's T20 World Cup on its 22nd attempt. Ireland broke its duck by chasing down 129 to beat West Indies by six wickets in Bristol. GETTY IMAGES

Walking into the sunset: New Zealand trio Sophie Devine, Lea Tahuu, and Suzie Bates received a guard of honour from their teammates and England players as they retired from international cricket after the match. England won the contest by nine wickets at The Oval. GETTY IMAGES

First-ball wonders: Both innings in the match between South Africa and Bangladesh saw batters bowled off the very first ball. Here, pacer Marufa Akter celebrates after uprooting Proteas captain Laura Wolvaardt's off stump. Despite stuttering during the chase, South Africa prevailed by four wickets at Lord's. AP

Not enough: Despite India captain Harmanpreet Kaur's blistering half-century, her fastest against Australia (25 balls), the 171-run target was comfortably chased down thanks to a 100-run partnership between Ellyse Perry and Ashleigh Gardner. The six-wicket defeat meant India failed to reach the knockouts for a second consecutive edition. AFP
