

Brahim Diaz.

Morocco and Brazil will face off in their group opener on June 14 in what will arguably be the first heavyweight clash of the World Cup.

The other two teams in Group C are making long-awaited returns to the grand stage.

Scotland stunned Denmark in the qualifiers to book its first World Cup appearance since 1998. Scott McTominay's winner in that game, an audacious overhead kick, was recently immortalised on a limited-edition Scottish banknote. Napoli's McTominay will carry the burden of Scottish expectations, both as a midfield engine and a penalty-box threat.

John McGinn and Andy Robertson are the other prominent stars for Scotland as it seeks to qualify for the World Cup knockout rounds for the first time.

For Haiti, the wait for the World Cup has been even longer. The North American side's first and only appearance in the tournament came in 1974, when it lost all three group-stage matches.

Haiti, ranked just 83rd in the world, will have to punch well above its weight if it is to make a mark in a group that promises plenty of intrigue.

Scott McTominay (Scotland)

In McTominay, Scotland has an all-purpose midfielder at the peak of his powers. His stock has risen sharply since his move from Manchester United to Napoli. The 29-year-old, who will likely slot in as a No. 10, is expected to be the conduit for Scotland's attacking intent at the World Cup.

Duckens Nazon' (Haiti)

In 2016, Duckens Nazon had a brief stint with Indian Super League side Kerala Blasters. A decade later, he heads to the World Cup as Haiti's all-time leading goalscorer. Nazon will look to become the second Haitian to score at the World Cup after Emmanuel Sanon, who found the net twice in 1974.
