

Wholesome evening: A South African family's first taste of the IPL, and Wankhede delivers its usual spectacle: noise, colour, and a shared language of cricket. EMMANUAL YOGINI

The game, and everything around it

Our correspondents on the IPL trail bring you stories, moments, and observations from beyond the boundary.

The Indian Premier League (IPL) is never just about cricket — it's a travelling carnival that pulls fans from across continents. At the Wankhede Stadium, even as the home team Mumbai Indians, continued to endure a stuttering season, the stands told a different story — alive with colour, noise, and a truly global presence.

During the clash against Lucknow Super Giants, The Diary caught up with Gordon Parsons, accompanied by his wife Hestor and daughter Alexandra.

A respected coach in South Africa, Parsons played a role in shaping the early careers of Kagiso Rabada and Quinton de Kock. While he had visited India before, this was a first
