

Later, in the dying stages of the clash, Barcelona manager Hansi Flick got his marching orders for vociferously protesting the official's decision to award just four minutes of added time after the second half, with the German indicating that more time should have been given. He will miss the season's El Clasico when his team takes on arch-rival Real Madrid on October 26.

Kylian Mbappe came good for Real Madrid again as his 80th-minute goal gave his team a 1-0 win against Getafe, but the match will be remembered for all the wrong reasons as Getafe had two players sent off in a space of seven minutes.

Atletico Madrid bounced back from its frustrating 1-1 draw against Celta Vigo. It beat Osasuna, albeit by the narrowest of margins, with Thiago Almada's 69th-minute strike proving enough for Diego Simeone and his men.

Villarreal played out a 2-2 draw against Betis, while both Basque clubs also settled for draws. Athletic Bilbao's match against Elche finished 0-0, while Real Sociedad was held to a 1-1 draw by 10-man Celta Vigo.

After matchday 9, Real Madrid tops the table with 24 points. Barcelona (22) is second, followed by Villarreal (17) and Atletico Madrid (16) in third and fourth.

Bundesliga

Der Klassiker stole the spotlight in German top-flight football, and it was Bayern Munich, which maintained its perfect start to the season, beating Borussia Dortmund 2-1, the Bavarians' seventh-straight victory. Harry Kane stole the show, bagging a goal and an assist. Kane now has 12 league goals and has scored 22 goals in 14 appearances for club and country so far this season.

RB Leipzig beat Hamburger SV

Derby drama: Bayern Munich, led by Harry Kane (9), maintained its perfect start to the season by beating Borussia Dortmund 2-1 for its seventh-straight victory. AP

2-1, with Eintracht Frankfurt drawing 2-2 against SC Freiburg.

Bayer Leverkusen played out a seven-goal thriller against Mainz, clinching a 4-3 win. VfB Stuttgart beat Wolfsburg 3-0.

After matchday 7, Bayern Munich (21) has a five-point lead at the top. RB Leipzig (16) is second, followed by Stuttgart (15) and Dortmund (14) in third and fourth. Leverkusen is fifth with 14 points.

Serie A

The recent gameweek in Serie A witnessed many shocks, with some of the traditional big teams losing points against weaker opposition.

Injury-riddled Napoli, missing the