When golf's European Tour — or the DP World Tour, as it has been known for the past four seasons — announced its final schedule for the latter part of 2025, New Delhi was strategically placed within the overall scheme of things.

Announced on April 23 this year, the DP World Tour India Championship quickly grabbed attention within the country's golfing community and beyond for several reasons — including the highest prize money ever for an event in the subcontinent and India's second event on the European Tour after the marquee Indian Open.

Its timing also stood out: scheduled towards the end of the year, it aligned perfectly with the national capital's early winter and festive season, while serving as the penultimate event in the Race to
