Daniel Naroditsky, the American chess Grandmaster and former child prodigy who rose to become one of the most influential voices in the game, has passed away at the age of 29.

A Grandmaster by 18, Naroditsky was celebrated not only for his sharp play but also for his insightful commentary and contributions as a coach. The Charlotte Chess Center in North Carolina, where he trained and mentored young players, announced his passing on social media, remembering him as "a gifted player, educator, and cherished member of the chess community."
