

Richa Ghosh

Age: 22

From: Siliguri, West Bengal

When she was barely five years old, Richa would go to watch her father play club cricket. That's where her journey began. Gradually, she made a name for herself in the Bengal State team and later made her international debut in 2020.

WC25: While her wicketkeeping hasn't been the best this tournament, Richa has delivered with the bat when required. The best example was her fiery 94 against South Africa in a league-stage fixture. Even in the final against the Proteas, she played a timely 24-ball 34 to help India reach a competitive total on a deteriorating pitch.

« There was pressure of the final but I gave a good performance, and that is a good thing. Everyone trusted that I could hit, and that means a lot for me.

Sneh Rana

Age: 31

From: Dehradun, Uttarakhand

Despite hailing from Uttarakhand, Sneh began her domestic career with Punjab before making her international debut in 2014. After years of being in and out of the national set-up, and grappling with injuries and the personal loss of her father, the all-rounder made a strong return to the Indian team this year.

WC25: Sneh has been an important all-round option, with the senior player using her experience whenever called upon. With the ball, she has taken key wickets and has been a handy contributor with the bat as well.

Renuka Singh Thakur

Age: 29

From: Shimla, Himachal Pradesh

Renuka's father, Kehar Singh, was a passionate cricket fan, so much so that he named his son after Vinod Kambli. However, Kehar passed away when Renuka was three. She began playing with her brother and slowly moved up through the Himachal Pradesh age-level teams. She made her international debut in 2021 and was also part of India's 2022 ODI World Cup squad.

WC25: As India's strike bowler, Renuka didn't play every game in this tournament, but she showed her experience in the crucial match against New Zealand, where she picked up two wickets. Her tight bowling efforts extended into the final, conceding just 28 runs in eight overs.
