6 } The number of women batters to cross 5000 runs during their ODI career. Two batters became a part of this exclusive group during the just-concluded World Cup tournament. India's Smriti Mandhana was the first to reach on October 12, followed by South African Laura Wolvaardt on October 20. Interestingly, both these players are the fastest to reach this milestone — 112 and 117 innings respectively.

0 } Number of women batters to aggregate 1000 ODI runs in a calendar year before 2025. Smriti Mandhana became the first (and only one) to achieve this in the history of women's international cricket during India's World Cup match against Australia in Visakhapatnam on 12 October 2025. No one else has achieved this in either Women's Tests or in Women's T20Is. England's Janette Brittin, with 531 Test runs in 1984, and Mandhana, with 763 T20I runs in 2024, hold the best aggregates in these formats.
