

Impact in final overs (41–50)

Runs by lower-order batters in Women's ODI World Cup 2025

late-order impact. Compared to 2017, averages increased from 17.68 to 24.34, and boundary percentages rose from 6.45 to 10.28, indicating both greater consistency and increased attacking intent. Between overs 41 and 50, the run rate also surged from 5.26 to 7.23, and the boundary percentage from 7.71 to 15.11, showcasing a growing ability to dictate momentum in the closing stages. Notably, of the record 133 sixes hit in the tournament, 45 came in the final 10 overs — just seven short of the 52 struck during the entire 2022 edition.

India's stronghold

This surge in late-order impact was perhaps most evident in India's campaign, with the team's strike rate touching 120 this year, compared to 94.52 in 2022. In the opener against Sri Lanka, Deepti Sharma and Amanjot Kaur stitched together a crucial 103-run partnership, with Amanjot contributing a match-saving 57 off 56 balls.

"You can't say India was in trouble. I was yet to bat," quipped Amanjot, who, along with Richa and Sneha Rana, embodied the calm self-belief that allowed the lower-order hitters to thrive.

Glimpses of Richa's special knock against South Africa in the league stage resurfaced in the final.

Walking in at No. 7, she imposed herself immediately, smashing a 24-ball 34 that included three fours and two sixes at a strike rate of 141.66.

Though the summit clash largely defied the trend of the lower order coming to the party, the rearguards of all the top teams were worth their weight in gold throughout the tournament and proved that the last line of defence could no longer be overlooked.

Introducing Schoolyard — Sportstar's New School Sports Corner

Welcome to Schoolyard, Sportstar's dedicated space for school sports. From thrilling interschool tournaments to the rise of young sporting stars, we're here to celebrate the passion, grit, and talent on school grounds across the country. Whether it's a standout athlete, an underdog victory, or a unique sports initiative, we want to hear your stories. Principals, PE teachers, coaches, or students — if your school has a sports story to tell, write to us at sportstar@thehindu.co.in with Subject line 'Schoolyard'. Let's put your champions in the spotlight, where they belong.

Editor, Sportstar