"Beautiful weekend." These were Lando Norris's first words after romping to a win at the Mexican Grand Prix at the Autodromo Hermanos Rodriguez in Mexico City. The 25 points earned propelled the Briton to the top of the Drivers' Championship for the first time since the Bahrain Grand Prix in April.

It was a flawless race for the 25-year-old, who caught the chequered flag over thirty seconds ahead of Charles Leclerc in second place. The margin was substantial in qualifying too, the papaya car finishing two and a half tenths ahead of the Monegasque's Ferrari.

After trailing his junior teammate Oscar Piastri for most of the season, Norris's uptick in form has coincided with the Australian's run of four races without a podium. In Mexico, Piastri started eighth, qualifying six tenths behind his teammate in equal machinery. On a track where cooling packages play a crucial role due to the high altitude and lighter air, Piastri struggled to showcase the car's true pace, only managing a fifth-place finish, forcing him to concede bragging rights in the championship.

Max Verstappen, the third protagonist in the title race, had an eventful outing. The reigning World Champion was forced to steer off track and cut across the grass in
