

surplus was kept by the BCCI. But we didn't mind as we knew the financial situation of the BCCI at the time.

Now, after our boys won the Champions Trophy, the BCCI announced a whopping Rs 58 crore for the squad and the support staff and selection committee. In July last year, after the stirring victory in the ICC T20 World Cup, the BCCI announced Rs 125 crore for the squad, support staff, and selectors. This is truly fantastic, as the Board, which is now awash with funds, is showing its appreciation for the efforts put in by everybody and rewarding them generously. The BCCI is also letting the players keep the prize money that the ICC announced for the winners, which is also a good amount each.

Windfall: The BCCI announced a whopping Rs 58 crore for the squad, support staff, and selection committee after India's Champions Trophy win. PTI

After the ICC T20 World Cup win and the Board's announcement of the prize money, the then-coach Rahul Dravid, ever the team man, refused to accept more than his fellow members of the coaching staff and, in fact, shared it equally with his colleagues.

It's been a fortnight since the BCCI announced the Champions Trophy rewards, but we haven't heard anything from the current coach on whether he will also do a Dravid. Or is it that Dravid, in this instance, is not a good role model?

The BCCI, which is now awash with funds, is showing its appreciation for the efforts put in by everybody and rewarding them generously.