

our cricket, we have definitely taken a step back. We have to accept that. Our pace bowling has become slower, and we are more comfortable playing in the shorter format. But all the big teams that are performing well have done so by playing the longer format, and once you do that, you can automatically shift across formats. We need to follow that model. We have to focus on the longer format to get better results.

The rise of league cricket has done a lot of harm to us. The players who are coming in want to play league cricket for four days, earn money, have fun, and move on. If we play with this attitude, we will run out of stars. Stars are made by playing Test cricket. If we promote our domestic cricket, we have a lot of spinners.

In the past, we gave several suggestions to the PCB that when the domestic season starts, they should prepare three types of wickets. Each team should be given two games on spin-friendly surfaces, one on fast strips, and one on a batting-friendly surface. By doing this, you will get to test your batters as well as the bowlers.

We have suggested several things to the PCB chairman. But the biggest setback has been the fact that over the last five to six years, the chairman has changed three to four times. And every time the chairman changes, it affects our cricket a lot. Whoever comes in brings in his own people, changes schedules, and that
