

departure to Korea. That's when he'll have to figure out how to get his five, four-and-a-half-metre-long fibreglass poles onto the flight.

As a decathlete, Tejaswin usually travels heavy. He brings relatively few clothes, but a lot of specialised kit: different shoes for each event, massage gear, supplements, javelins, a discus, and sometimes his shot put. However, the toughest item to get through the New Delhi International Airport is the pole vault equipment.

When he can, the 25-year-old prefers to

All baggage at Delhi's Terminal 3 is transferred through two cargo lifts – neither of which can fit a 16-foot-long pole. A special lift has to be used instead.
