For the upcoming tour of England, the Indian men's cricket team will be accompanied by a reduced support staff. The BCCI has opted not to renew the contracts of assistant coach Abhishek Nayar, fielding coach T. Dilip, and strength and conditioning (S&C) coach Soham Desai. The team will not see any new faces, except for South African Adrian le Roux, who will replace Soham Desai as the new S&C coach.

For the first time in 25 years, West Indies has failed to qualify for the Women's Cricket World Cup. Meanwhile, Pakistan triumphed over Thailand to secure its spot in the prestigious tournament, which will be hosted in India later this year. Due to ongoing political tensions, matches between Pakistan and India will be played at a neutral venue. Pakistan displayed dominance during the qualifiers, easily winning all five of its matches.

The International Cricket Council (ICC) has established a dedicated task force to assist displaced Afghan women cricketers, marking a significant step in supporting their continued participation in the sport. In collaboration with the BCCI, the England and Wales Cricket Board (ECB), and Cricket Australia (CA), the ICC aims to provide substantial support to these players through this pioneering initiative. As part of the effort, the ICC will also create a dedicated fund to offer direct financial assistance, ensuring that the cricketers have the resources to continue their careers and pursue their passion for the game.

Cricket is set to make a historic return to the Olympic Games at the Los Angeles 2028 Olympics, with the City of Pomona on the West Coast selected as the venue for the competition. This marks the first time in over a century that cricket will be featured in the Olympic Games, with the sport last appearing in 1900. The LA28 will host both men's and women's cricket competitions, each with six participating teams.
