

beat Celta Vigo in a seven-goal thriller, maintaining its lead at the top of the table.

Barca seemed to be cruising when Ferran Torres scored to take the lead, but Borja Iglesias' hat-trick at the other end turned the game on its head.

With 25 minutes of regulation time left, Dani Olmo halved the deficit before Raphinha levelled things up three minutes later. It was those two who combined for the winner, with Olmo winning a penalty and the Brazilian dispatching it into the top corner in the eighth minute of added time.

Meanwhile, Real Madrid seemed to be carrying the ghosts of its Champions League exit at the hands of Arsenal and was almost held to a goalless draw by Athletic Club. However, Federico Valverde produced a wonder strike in the third minute of stoppage time to ensure Los Blancos stayed four points behind Barca with six games left to play.

Serie A

The race for the league title is boiling down to the final games of the season, as the last two champions, Inter Milan and Napoli, are first and second respectively, level on 71 points.

Inter put its chances of retaining the Scudetto in danger after suffering a shock 0-1 loss against Bologna. Riccardo Orsolini's spectacular stoppage-time bicycle kick in the fourth minute of added time boosted Bologna to fourth in the standings and into the Champions League slots. Inter has now dropped five points in its last three games in the league.

Top gun: Raphinha put up a stellar show and finished with a penalty that helped Barcelona come back from two goals down to win against Celta Vigo.

GETTYIMAGES

On the other hand, Napoli was made to work hard by the bottom-placed AC Monza and edged out a 1-0 win to put pressure on the reigning champion. Scott McTominay headed in his ninth goal in the league, midway through the second half, to take all three points.

If Inter and Napoli remain level on points at the end of 38 games, they will play each other in a single match

« The race for the Serie A title is boiling down to the final games of the season »