

Most full tosses in IPL 2025

	Balls	Wickets from full toss	Full-toss ER
Jasprit Bumrah	58	6	7.44

Shardul Thakur	34	4	11.11
Eshan Malinga	33	3	9.63
Mukesh Kumar	28	1	10.92

yorkers – the third-highest tally. Among the top five wicket-taking pacers this season, only his teammate Trent Boult delivered more. And that's despite Bumrah missing the first four games of the campaign.

A closer look at the length distribution of the aforementioned top five – Arshdeep Singh, Prasad Krishna, Josh Hazlewood, Bumrah, and Boult – highlights Bumrah's aggressive approach with fuller deliveries.

More than 40 per cent of his balls were on the fuller side (full, yorker or full toss). None of the others had such a high share. Notably, among these five, Bumrah also had the largest gap between full-length balls and full tosses, pointing to the extra 'lift' he generates via his hyperextension and wrist-driven downforce.

Another standout is Bumrah's reduced share of length balls. Among the five, he bowled the fewest in that category. Over the last few seasons, this trend has only become more pronounced.

Why the shift? Batters today are more comfortable taking on length deliveries – encouraged by shorter boundaries, friendlier rules, and the high-scoring nature of modern T20s.

Bumrah has responded by tweaking his lengths, relying more on back-of-a-length and fuller deliveries – effectively cutting out a major scoring option.

Gulf in class

Since the introduction of the Impact Player rule, the bat-ball balance in the IPL has tilted heavily in favour of the batters. Run rates have soared and totals of 200-plus runs have become routine.

Bumrah, however, has not just kept pace – he has outstripped the trend. The Indian quick ended IPL 2025 with an economy of 6.87 – the best for any bowler who delivered at least five overs in the season.

It's long been accepted that Bumrah is a cut above the rest. But

In 'full' swing: Bumrah bowled 58 full tosses in IPL 2025 — more than any other bowler and the highest he's ever delivered in a single season. R. V. MOORTHY
