E Every alternate year, the summer break usually offers footballers a rare window of calm — a chance to relax and reflect after a long club season. This year, however, 32 teams from around the world will see that downtime drastically reduced as they are called into action for the revamped FIFA Club World Cup, which runs from June 14 to July 13 across 12 venues in the United States.

While FIFA president Gianni Infantino (in pic) has described the competition as a chance to “create
