"Neeraj goes into each competition thinking it's a new competition and the dice has to be rolled again. What was before does not count. It's the same even now. He throws 90m and then Weber comes and throws bigger. But he's someone who is fine with it. If someone else does better than him, he's OK. It's a good quality to have. Otherwise, you take too much stress," he says.

Klaus hopes Neeraj manages to stay injury-free if only so they could meet again. "There is a Diamond League in Paris in July. I might be back home at that time, but I think I can take the train to Paris and meet him there," he says.

But Klaus has higher expectations for Neeraj than just another Diamond League. "I think he can compete for many more years. He should compete in Los Angeles, of course, but I also think he can compete in Brisbane. I myself want to be around in another 10 years and I'd like to see this," he says.

Although he's back in India looking to unearth more talent, Klaus knows it won't be easy. For one, he's not going to be spending as much time in India as he had during his previous stint. Then of course there's the question of whether there are more diamonds out there.

"You had two very good throwers (Shivpal Yadav and Manu DP) and they both failed dope tests. Now you have another good thrower — Sachin Yadav (facing page), right? He is throwing well, and I hope he stays clean. But can you find another Neeraj? I don't know," he says.
