It was a night when one Red got on equal footing with another. After Sir Alex Ferguson had 'knocked Liverpool off their perch' as he had promised, the Merseyside club finally won its 20th league title to equal Manchester United's tally after thrashing Tottenham Hotspur 5-1 at Anfield.

Arne Slot became the first Dutch manager to win the Premier League, and Virgil van Dijk became the first Dutch player to win the Premier League as captain.

Liverpool dominated every department en route to its title, with the most goals (80), most shots (591), most shots on target (216), most expected goals (75.5), most big chances created (136), and touches in the opposition's box (1,274). It has been at the top of the Premier League table for 206 days this season, 165 more than any other side.

However, the Reds could not follow their league-winning match on a positive note, losing 1-3 to Chelsea, which gave a guard of honour to Slot and his team.

Liverpool's rival Manchester United's woes in the league continued with a 3-4 loss against Brentford, with manager Ruben
