

winner from Emi Buendia to see off relegation-battling FC Heidenheim.

The result helped Leverkusen cut the gap to Bayern down to six points and remain within touching distance of the leader, with just six matches left.

Bayern, however, will hope to cling to the top spot and provide club legend Thomas Muller with the perfect send-off after he announced he would leave the side after the Club World Cup in June.

The 35-year-old will draw the curtain on a tenure spanning 25 years, during which he won 33 trophies and became the club's record appearance-maker with a total of 743 competitive matches.

Meanwhile, Lionel Messi continued to break records at Inter Miami when he scored against Toronto FC in Major League Soccer, becoming the player with the most goal contributions at the club.

With 24 goals and 20 assists, he surpassed his compatriot Gonzalo Higuain, who had 43 goal contributions in 67 matches. Messi, meanwhile, breached that milestone in just 29 matches.
