

« There is only one fight that we should be fighting – and that is the fight against doping.

– International Olympic Committee president Kirsty Coventry, addressing World Anti-Doping Agency's World Conference on Doping in Sport »

$28

LA28 said that fans will be able to register starting January 14 for a random ticket draw covering all Olympic sports at the Los Angeles Games, with organisers promising at least 1 million tickets priced at $28 (approx. ₹2540 as of publishing). Registration via the LA28 tickets page will give fans a chance to secure a time slot to purchase tickets in April, with fans who are not selected automatically registered for subsequent ticket drops.

"Every sport starts at $28, and that's not just lip service to a couple of tickets in the corner of some venue, but a meaningful number of tickets," said Allison Katz-Mayfield, LA28's senior vice president of Games delivery revenue. "We're looking at least a million tickets at $28 and we've got about a third of our tickets under $100."

2nd

World number one Aryna Sabalenka has been named WTA Player of the Year for the second consecutive season after spending the entire year at the top of the rankings, the governing body of women's tennis announced. Sabalenka capped a dominant 2025 campaign by successfully defending her U.S. Open title, leading the tour in match wins and titles, reaching nine finals. Sabalenka also set a single-season prize money record of USD 15,008,519, the WTA said.

WINNING MOMENT

« I've started strengthening and started doing a little bit more of the rotational component that I haven't been able to do and just letting the disc set.

– Tiger Woods on his recovery from the disc replacement surgery he had in October » Americans Andrew Novak and Lauren Coughlin with the trophy after winning the Grant Thornton Invitational 2025 golf tournament at Tiburon Golf Club in Naples, Florida. They posted a 28-under 188 for the three-round event.

GETTY IMAGES