

AFP

Giant killer

Bodø/Glimt's historic win over Manchester City headlines a Champions League night of shock results.

Joan Mathew Jacob
joan.mathew@thehindu.co.in

When Manchester City travelled to face winless FK Bodø/Glimt following a humbling at the hands of its city rival, many would have expected Pep Guardiola's side to make amends in a fast and spectacular manner.

Instead, City endured more suffering as the club from northern Norway pulled off perhaps the biggest shock of the league phase this season.

Sloppy defending handed Kasper Høgh (above, extreme left) a first-half brace, while a brilliant solo effort from Jens Petter Hauge helped Bodø build a healthy lead.

Rayan Cherki's strike for City seemed to revive the visiting fans' spirits, but it was soon dampened as Rodri received his marching orders for picking up two yellow cards within a minute, handing the Norwegian side a deserved victory.

The City players refunding the ticket price for the travelling fans may soften the blow for now; however, Guardiola faces a crucial final league-phase fixture against Galatasaray as City looks to finish in the top eight and directly qualify for the knockouts.

Sticking with the theme of shocks, title-holder Paris Saint-Germain was beaten 1-2 in the dying seconds by Sporting CP in Lisbon, with Colombian Luiz Suarez bagging a match-winning brace. Meanwhile, Real Madrid began its European campaign under Álvaro Arbeloa with a 6-1 thrashing of AS Monaco, with Vinicius Jr silencing his critics with a goal and two assists. On the other hand, its arch-rival Barcelona, powered by a double from young Fermin Lopez, survived a mild scare to dispatch Slavia Prague 4-2.

Arsenal stayed perfect, beating

Inter Milan 3-1 after Gabriel Jesus found the back of the net twice in his first Champions League start of the season. Viktor Gyokeres sealed the game and a top-two finish for Arsenal, ensuring home advantage in the second leg all the way to the potential semifinals.

Bayern Munich was the only other club to book its place in the knockouts, after Harry Kane scored twice in three minutes to beat Belgian side Union Saint-Gilloise.

Ahead of the final matchday of the league phase, eight teams — from sixth to 13th — are tied on 13 points, with six direct qualification spots to play for. Just ahead of them on 14 points sits Tottenham Hotspur, which, unlike its domestic form, is thriving on the continental stage after a 2-0 win over German giant Borussia Dortmund.

European royalty Real Madrid and Liverpool sit third and fourth, respectively, with 15 points apiece.