continue to deepen talent pools.

Having hit the Olympic cycle running, Jyothi too is not planning to relax any time soon.

"We can't just relax now. Other countries will also be pushing hard over the next three years.

"We have to maintain our standards because, in the next couple of years, we'll have to earn qualification quotas to compete at the Olympics. We have to keep performing not only internationally but also domestically, because there will be many other archers who want to go to the Olympics," she said.
