

When you create a model, Django automatically adds an id field to each model, which is used as the primary key for the model. Using this option, you can change the primary key to the field with this option.

`db_column`

Django uses a field name for the column name in the database table. Using this option, you can customize the column name.