

and Python version you're using. Not only will the posted answers solve your problem, but they can help future programmers who have the same question and find your post.

Don't feel discouraged if you seem to be constantly looking up answers and asking for help. Programming is an extensive field, and no one can hold all of its details in their head at once. Even experienced software developers check online for documentation and solutions daily. Instead, focus on becoming skillful at finding solutions, and you'll be on your way to becoming a proficient Pythonista.