After watching his team pull off one of its greatest comebacks in the Indian Super League — where it was down 0-2 at half-time against FC Goa and then went on to win 4-2 — Kerala Blasters head coach Ivan Vukomanovic (left) said his boys needed such a shock to get back on track after three straight losses.

"Nobody expected that. I think the Blasters have never come back with such a result after being down 0-2 at half time," said the Serb.

"Maybe we needed that kind of shock or maybe that kind of team talk again at half-time knowing that if we respond correctly in the beginning of the second half we could get back on track. And that actually happened. I'm so glad for them, so proud."

"But we must stay humble because we are still nowhere, we are in no man's land. We must not think we are great...we still have six big games, six big steps to respond and fight for every minute, for every point."
