

CHAMPIONS

Women's Team
INDIA

'Every match, against any opponent, is a learning opportunity'

The women's team's title run at the Badminton Asia Team Championships hints at a bright year ahead for Indian shuttlers, particularly with Paris on the horizon.

APARNA POPAT

The Indian women's team, led by double Olympic medallist P.V. Sindhu, recently clinched the Badminton Asia Team Championships title with a thrilling 3-2 victory over Thailand in the final in Shah Alam, Malaysia.

The victory gives India a confident start to the season, which becomes important given the event roster 2024 has for badminton. This is India's first BATC title, a feat that saw the outfit beat badminton superpowers China, Hong Kong, Japan and Thailand enroute to the top of the podium.

Let's put this campaign in perspective. When we entered this tournament, I don't think there were expectations in terms of how the team would perform, but there were people looking out for individual performances like Sindhu coming back after a while post injury. There was focus on the doubles scene because of Paris qualification considerations and so those two pairs were closely watched. And then we had a couple of gifted youngsters as well in