

» FROM THE WORLD OF FOOTBALL

AFP

1

Klopp to step down

After nine eventful, trophy-filled years, Jürgen Klopp will step down as Liverpool manager at the end of the ongoing season.

Klopp, who took over the reins of the Premier League side in October 2015, led the Reds to their first league win in 30 years, in 2020. In 2019, the German manager guided Liverpool to the UEFA Champions League title.

"It is that I am running out of energy. I know that I cannot do the job again and again and again and again," said Klopp.

Liverpool is currently atop the Premier League points table.

2

REUTERS

Super Bowl debut for Messi

Global football icon Lionel Messi will make his Super Bowl debut, headlining a Michelob Ultra — an alcoholic beverage brand — commercial. The Inter Miami star will anchor a 60-second advertisement that will air at the Super Bowl on February 11, 2024, in Las Vegas. The ad will show Messi playing beach football with a dog and ordering a Michelob Ultra beer at a bar.

3

GETTY IMAGES

Haaland to return soon

Manchester City manager Pep Guardiola revealed that his star striker, Erling Haaland, is close to making a comeback from a prolonged injury break.

"He is on the verge of returning. Training camp was good; we trained some sessions, and the last two days here he trained, but he's not perfect, and we wait a little bit more," said Guardiola.

Haaland has missed City's last 10 competitive fixtures following a foot injury. City has coped well with the loss of its primary goal threat, winning the FIFA Club World Cup and progressing in the FA Cup during the period.