

EVERY SECOND MATTERS

These unsung heroes of chess serve as the backbone of a player's preparation, operating diligently behind the scenes.

Mayank
mayank.c@thehindu.co.in

It all began with Nick Fury assembling the Avengers for a battle that would decide the fate of the world. One by one, heroes with unique abilities were brought together, forming a team greater than the sum of its parts. Much like Fury's iconic call to arms, D. Gukesh's journey to becoming the youngest World chess champion was marked by a masterfully crafted team of Seconds and support staff, each contributing their own expertise to his triumph.

Seconds, the unsung heroes of chess, serve as the backbone of a player's preparation, operating diligently behind the scenes. While the player basks in the spotlight, it is their meticulous work that fuels the player's journey. Tasked with perfecting every aspect of preparation — from analysing openings and refining strategies to offering psychological reinforcement — Seconds form an indispensable support system.

After Gukesh's triumph at the Candidates Tournament in Toronto in April, assembling his team became a top priority. With backing from WestBridge and WACA, he was able to secure the resources needed to bring together the right people, both on and off the board.

Sharp minds

Leading Gukesh's campaign was Poland's Grzegorz Gajewski, a chess virtuoso with a keen eye for strategy, who had been working with the prodigy long before the World championship. It was Gukesh's mentor, five-time World champion