

Ruthless: Manchester City became the first side to win four Premier League titles on the trot. GETTY IMAGES force under legendary midfielder Xabi Alonso, who guided Bayer Leverkusen to its first Bundesliga title, breaking Bayern Munich's 11-year reign.

Alonso's men not only won the league but did so with utter dominance, remaining undefeated throughout the season. In 34 matches, Leverkusen won 28 and drew six, finishing with 90 points.

Serie A saw the age-old rivals Inter Milan and AC Milan battle for the Scudetto. In the end, it was the blue side of Milan that prevailed, with Inter clinching the title with 94 points, 19 more than runner-up AC Milan.

Since PSG was injected with Qatari investment, the French top-flight has hardly seen a change in narrative. The 2023-24 season was no different as the Paris-based club cruised to the title, finishing nine points ahead of second-placed Monaco.

However, it was a bittersweet season for PSG, having lost Kylian Mbappe to Real Madrid in a transfer marred by a public fallout over pending salary payments.

In the UEFA Champions League, Real Madrid won a record-extending 15th title (right), beating Borussia Dortmund in the final, reaffirming its dominance as the undisputed king of Europe.

In the Women's Champions

League, Barcelona defended its title by beating Lyon 2-0 in the final, taking its overall tally to three.

Spanish dominance and the Albiceleste fairytale

2024 saw two major international tournaments — the European Championships and the Copa America.

In the Euros, new manager Luis de la Fuente guided Spain to its third title. Displaying a brand of flamboyant yet direct football — quite unlike the Luis Enrique era that was criticised for its 'possession-without-result' approach — Spain beat England 2-1 in the final. The Three Lions' wait for a major men's international title since 1966