

GETTY IMAGES

continued.

Spain unearthed a new star in La Masia product Lamine Yamal, who, at just 17, was a key player in the forward line.

With one goal and four assists, he won the Young Player of the Tournament Award and became the youngest player to score in the Euros and win the title.

In South America, Lionel Scaloni's Argentina continued its dominance, defending its Copa América title and emulating Spain's feat of winning three major international tournaments on the trot.

Facing a rejuvenated Colombia in the final, boosted by James Rodríguez's form, Argentina toiled before Lautaro Martínez scored the decisive goal in the 112th minute.

Martínez finished as the tournament's top scorer with five goals, while Emiliano Martínez was named Best Goalkeeper. James won the Best Player Award.

Future bright: Spain, featuring young sensation Lamine Yamal (No. 19) and Ballon d'Or winner Rodri (third from right), won the Euros after beating England 2-1 in the final.

GETTY IMAGES

Individual brilliance

After an exceptional season with Manchester City and Spain, Rodri won the Ballon d'Or for the best men's player of the year.

Aitana Bonmati of Barcelona claimed the women's player of the year award for the second consecutive year.

Carlo Ancelotti and Emma Hayes won the men's and women's coaches of the year awards.

Vinicius Jr, despite missing out on the Ballon d'Or, was recognised with FIFA's Men's Player of the Year Award after winning La Liga and the Champions League with Real Madrid. Bonmati won the women's award,

