

of the Indian Grand Prix — and Argentina were excluded from the calendar, while the finale in Valencia had to be relocated to Barcelona due to floods in the region. Nevertheless, the fight for the ultimate crown went on until the very end, with Martin and his No. 89 Prima Pramac finishing on top.

The Spaniard's consistency helped him edge defending champion Bagnaia in the season-ending race. Martin also became the first rider from an independent team to win the championship in the modern MotoGP era. While Martin bid farewell to the Ducati team, he did so with a historic win before switching to Aprilia.

Indian motorsport events

India continued to improve its motorsport infrastructure and establish itself as a growing hub for the sport. The Federation of Motor Sports Clubs of India (FMSCI), the country's governing body, continued to organise multiple National Championships for two-wheelers, four-wheelers, karts, and more.

The Indian Racing Festival — featuring the Indian Racing League (IRL) and the FIA Formula 4 Indian Championship (F4IC) — went ahead with its third season. There were five rounds of racing, including India's first night street race: a 3.5-kilometre stretch around the Island Grounds, transformed into the Chennai Formula Racing Circuit (above). This
