Selection conundrum looms as another white-ball reset beckons

England has won just four of 13 ODIs since its 2023 World Cup exit and enters the Champions Trophy after four straight series defeats.

Once the reigning world champion in both white-ball formats, England bungled two World Cup defences, in 2023 and 2024, leading to changes in the coaching staff and player personnel.

However, resisting any knee-jerk reaction regarding captaincy, the team has persisted with Jos Buttler through troubled times, and it will hope the 34-year-old repays the faith by reversing England's fortunes in the ICC Champions Trophy.

Test coach Brendon McCullum took over the reins of the white-ball teams from Matthew Mott and is expected to effect a Bazball-like reset that has come to define his coaching tenure in the longest format.

However, England's lead-up to the
