Ireland beat Zimbabwe by 63 runs in the one-off Test to secure its third consecutive win in the format. After Ireland was restricted to 260 in the first innings, courtesy of Blessing Muzarabani's seven-for, Nick Welch's 90 and Muzarabani's hard-fought 47 helped the host take a slim lead of seven runs. Fifties from Andy Balbirnie and Lorcan Tucker powered Ireland to 298, setting a target of 292. Though Wessly Madhevere battled through 195 balls for his 84, left-arm spinner Matthew Humphrey's (above) six for 57 proved too hot to handle.

Australia dominated the Women's Ashes series against England and won the only Test to clinch a 16-0 win. Alana King spun a web around England to help the host win by an innings and 122 runs, completing a historic whitewash for the first time in the multi-format era. After King's four-wicket haul restricted the visitor to 170, centuries from Annabel Sutherland and Beth Mooney helped Australia secure a 270-run first-innings lead. The 29-year-old spinner went on to take her maiden Test five-for and received ample support from Ashleigh Gardner to bundle England out in three days.

MI Cape Town lifted its maiden SA20 title after defeating defending champion Sunrisers Eastern Cape by 76 runs. After finishing last in the previous two seasons, the Rashid Khan-led MI Cape Town hardly put a foot wrong in the third season. Kagiso Rabada produced a spell of four for 25 in 3.4 overs and was backed by Player of the Match Trent Boult, who took two wickets for nine runs in his four-over spell. The bowling unit helped dismiss Sunrisers Eastern Cape for 105 in response to MI Cape Town's 181 for eight. The second-highest total in an SA20 final came on the back of powerful cameos, with three Cape Town batters scoring more than 30.

Dubai Capitals (DC) was crowned ILT20 champion after edging Desert Vipers (DV) by four wickets in the final. Half-centuries from Sam Curran and Max Holden guided the Vipers to a competitive total of 189 for five. DC was in trouble early in the chase, with David Warner, Gulbadin Naib and Sam Billings falling cheaply. Rovman Powell, who got a second life after a wicketkeeping error by Azam Khan, hammered 63 off 48 balls, while Shai Hope and Sikandar Raza made key contributions to help the Capitals chase the target with four balls to spare.
